

November 14, 2016

From the files of Mr. T . . .

No matter where we stand politically, and despite the deep-rooted ideological divide, we can agree on the fact we are eternally indebted to the brave, selfless and heroic servicemen and women who valiantly fought for us to maintain our cherished and prized way of life. It is our responsibility as educators to imbue our children with the lessons from the Constitution, and it is our duty as parents to shepherd our children to become kind and decent human beings. Then, no matter where we stand politically, and despite the deep-rooted ideological divide, our children, who will one day assume the mantle of leadership and adulthood, can begin building bridges and finding common ground in order to continue making America the beacon of hope and greatness. This will happen because we saw it fit to help our children build social, intellectual and emotional capacity.

Time is ticking, and our children are waiting for us. Challenge yourselves to believe that the moment of grace begins now.

Sincerely,

Mr T, Principal
Columbus Magnet

(I took this candid at our Veteran's Day All School Meeting, November 11, 2016 @Columbus Magnet School)

